Great Ovation to Returning Troops at Savannah.

(P. & A.)

A GREAT welcome was given to the last returning troops of the American Army of Occupation when the United States transport St. Mihiel arrived at Savannah, Ga., on the afternoon of Feb. 7. Great throngs lined the docks and river front to hail the returning soldiers with vociferous acclamations.

At the foot of Bull Street, a stone's throw from the Court House and just across the central square, waited the revenue cutter Yamacraw, in command of Captain Von Boskerck, and the tug William F. McCauley, put by Captain Frank W. Spencer, General Manager of the Atlantic Towing Company, at the disposal of journalists and photographers. Both ships were gay from stern to stern with big "welcome" signs and the colorful lines of international code signal flags as they snapped in the breeze.

As the newspaper boat swung in under the St. Mihiel's port ladder officers, swords already belted at their sides in preparation for ceremonies to come, lined the upper deck, many with their wives and daughters, some stalwarts holding youngsters high enough to see, while the heads of other little ones just protruded above the deck canvas.

A moment more and there was a scramble aboard of army officers, city, State and county officials, American Legion men, reporters, movie men, and last of all up the swaying ladder a group of Savannah girls who had braved the weather and the waves to be the first to put their arms about the waists of alien sisters and hug them into America.

At 2:10 P. M. the St. Mihiel and her escort was rapidly drawing near the centre of the city. Then came a flash of fire, a belch of white smoke and two old brass pieces roared in front of the Chatham Artillery quarters. They are the very same pieces that General

George Washington presented to the Chatham Artillery, second oldest military organization in the country, for gallant work at the siege of Chatham. Again and again they fired, holding together, it seemed, by a miracle, and speaking not only for themselves but as well for that wealth of military trophies, unable to talk for themselves, that are significant of Savannah's military history.

The first meal served to the officers and enlisted men of the Eighth Infantry was a delicious barbecue prepared and served in the park extension under the supervision of The Newell News.

Following the disembarkation of the troops from the transport and a parade to the park extension out Bull Street, the soldiers stacked their arms and marched to the tables, which were arranged in orderly rows near the pits in which the meat was cooked. Among the articles on the menu were roast pork, "mulligan," hot rolls and soft drinks. No program was observed, the meal being served informally by about 300 ladies under the supervision of Mr. West. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the American Legion also aided in the preparation of the barbecue. All of the pork was donated by Chatham County farms, and men from the farms began the preparation of the barbecue on Tuesday night.

Early Tuesday night fires were started in the trenches, dug earlier in the day, and the meat for the barbecue was laid on gratings across the trenches and thoroughly cooked. Preparations were made for serving in the Chatham Artillery Hall in case of rain, but this was not necessary. Many of the soldiers were accompanied by their wives and children, who also took part in the festivities.

Cigarettes were distributed to the men by the Knights of Columbus, and other supplies for the barbecue were donated by Savannah firms.

Obelisk Out of Plumb : Acrobatic Skating Feat

LEANING OBELISK

Central Park obelisk, brought in 1880 from Egypt, which was recently found to be out of plumb some 13 degrees. The fact was noted by a Canadian scientist.
(Wide World Photos.)

THE obelisk in Central Park, which has long been one of its most conspicuous ornaments, has been standing there for over forty-two years. It was brought from Egypt in 1880 and placed on its present site. It has remained, however, for a recent visitor to the Park to discover that, as he alleges, the obelisk is 13 degrees out of plumb. Mr. M. B. Cotsworth of Vancouver, B. C., a scientist who is greatly interested in mathematical subjects, and who recently took observations at the Washington Monument in the national capital for calendar purposes, noticed when he was walking in the Park at noon that the obelisk cast a shadow to the degree indicated. Whether this fact was due to a defect in the obelisk itself or in its setting was not stated.

HUGE CANAL PROJECT

One of the greatest engineering projects now in progress on this continent is the building of the Welland Ship Canal in Canada. The work, which was begun before the World War, was interrupted by that struggle and has now been resumed. It is expected that the work will be finished in 1926. When the canal is completed it will permit the largest lake boats of at least 25-

Landscape Made From Silk: Ingenious Illusions

foot draught to unload at Prescott for reshipment in 14-foot draught vessels to Montreal. This will furnish to the grain producers of the Northwest water transportation for 2,339 miles to the Straits of Belle Isle. If the St. Lawrence is jointly improved by Canada and the United States, cargoes of grain can be shipped direct from any port on the Great Lakes to seaports all over the world. This canal will be the only worthy rival to the Panama Canal. In the case of the latter there is a difference of 85 feet between the levels of Gatun Lake and the ocean. In the case of the Welland Canal, Lake Erie is 326½ feet higher than Lake Ontario. In order to handle this drop, the new Welland Canal is provided with seven locks, each of which has a lift of 46½ feet, or nearly twice the lift on the Panama Canal. The canal will be made 200 feet wide at the bottom, and for the present will be excavated to a depth of 25 feet only, but all the structures will be built with a view to a possible further depth of 30 feet. When the canal was projected it was estimated that the cost would be $50,000,000, but at prices now prevailing that figure will be exceeded by many millions.

NEW SKATING WONDER

Harry Kaskey of Chicago on Feb. 1 finished victor in the Saranac Lake Tournament of the Adirondack Gold Cup Skating Circuit with a total point score of 150. Charles Gorman of St. John, N. B., who for a time threatened Kaskey's victory, took second honors with a total of 80 points. Richard Donovan of Johnson City took third place with 40 points. William Steinmetz of Chicago and Paul Forsman of New York shared fourth honors with 20 points apiece. A four-cornered tie marks fifth position, E. Reed of Chicago, E. Gloster of Toronto, Bobbie Hearn of Brooklyn and Pat Cochrane of Johnson City each having 10 points. Frank Garnett of St. John, N. B., and William Murphy of New York bring up the rear of the point scorers with 5 each.

CAMOUFLAGING LIVING ANIMALS

A new method of creating on the screen the illusion of prehistoric monsters that roamed the world during the age of reptiles has been evolved by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Park. Actual animals are cleverly camouflaged so that with the proper film devices they may give the illusion of mammoth prehistoric creatures many times their real size. The camouflaged alligator is here shown doing duty as a dinosaur. (Kadel & Herbert.)

TOBACCO COSTUME

A novel feature of the Tobacco Show at the Grand Central Palace was this costume made entirely of raw tobacco and worn by Miss Helen Leopold. (Wide World Photos.)

Every quality that goes into the making of a star Kaskey displayed in the events. When he won the 440-yard dash, forcing Gorman into second position, with Hearn third, he proved that he had speed to spare. The watches caught the flier at 38 2-5 seconds.

Mirror-Like Pool Reflecting Lincoln Memorial

THE beauty of the Lincoln Memorial at Washington has been still further enhanced by the creation of a limpid pool near by, in which the building is mirrored with striking clearness.

The building itself is one of the noblest expressions of architecture on the American Continent. In its compelling simplicity and purity of line it may be compared with the Taj Mahal at Agra, India, that "exhalation of a dream."

It has thirty-six Doric columns, representing the States of the Union at the time that Lincoln was President. These are in the purest style of Grecian architecture. Above the columns are forty-eight sculptured festoons, typifying the States of the Union as constituted at present. The building is of white marble, standing in flawless beauty at the end of the great Mall, which is one of the notable features of the national capital. It sustains harmonious relations with the Capitol, whose imposing dome rises at the east, and to the Washington Monument, whose granite finger points skyward at a little distance, with the Virginia hills as a background. It is in accord with the eternal fitness of things that these memorials to

DRIVING FROM A HAYSTACK

America's two greatest Presidents — Washington, under whom the nation came into being; Lincoln, by whose labors it was preserved and by whose blood it was hallowed—should stand in close proximity as shrines to which posterity may pay pilgrimage and tribute.

The memorial is located in Potomac Park on the great axis of the city as originally laid out by L'Enfant, the architect selected by Washington himself to beautify the capital. In a selection of the site it was considered that the memorial need not be so high as to suggest comparison with the Washington obelisk, which rises to a height of 555 feet, and that in the absence of near-by structures it should be visible and conspicuous for great distances. Therefore a broad plain set in an amphitheatre of hills was chosen as its location. By means of terraces the ground was raised until the floor of the building was forty-five feet higher than the original grade level. A circular terrace 1,000 feet in diameter was first created, and about that four concentric rows of trees were planted, leaving a plateau 755 feet in diameter, a few feet greater than the length of the Capitol. From the centre of the plateau rises a rectangular stone terrace 256 feet long and 186 feet wide and surrounded by roadways and walks. The memorial is reached by a series of steps built from a marine platform 204 feet long and 134 feet wide. The height of the structure above the finished grade at the base of the terrace is 99 feet, thus making the total height of the building above the ground level 122 feet.

By exterior measurement the memorial hall is 156 feet long and 84 feet wide. The floors and the walls are of colored marble. The colonnade is 188 feet long and 118 wide, the columns being 44 feet high and 7 feet 5 inches in diameter at the base.

World's Greatest Sounding Board in Vast Natural Amphi- theatre

MORE than 3,000 people assembled recently in the immense natural amphitheatre on the site of Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, Ga., to hear a theatre orchestra play, with the design of proving the adaptability of the site for producing orchestra music for audiences of great size. According to musicians who tested it, the perpendicular pile of granite several hundred feet high forms the greatest natural sounding board in the world. The test preceded the proposed construction of the amphitheatre, which will be terraced to accommodate an audience of 100,000 persons. The contour of the land makes it possible to include as much as 500 acres in the amphitheatre. It will be suitable for great celebrations, national and international festivals and similar occasions when it is desirable to furnish accommodations for audiences that would exceed many times the capacity of any structure on this continent. (P. & A. Photos.)

Scientific Developments and Mechanical Devices

MOVIES BY RADIO

A device to cause pictures to be heard and seen at the same time by means of radio has been invented by C. Francis Jenkins here shown. Government high power stations have been placed at the disposal of Mr. Jenkins for his experiments. A still photograph may now be sent in about six minutes. If a photograph could be sent in one-sixteenth of a second then the eye will see the pictures as on the motion-picture screen with an apparently continuous motion. The photograph to be transmitted is sliced into hundreds of perpendicular sections and the projected image of each section is moved across a so-called photo electrical cell. The pictures are impressed point by point upon this so-called cell and a similar process takes place at the receiving end.

LAKE AND RIVER CONNECTED

Water rushing through from Lake Pontchartrain to the Mississippi on Feb. 5, when the break was made that separated the two bodies of water. The event marked the realization of a dream that New Orleans had cherished for a hundred years—the connecting up of the Mississippi and Lake Pontchartrain in a navigable waterway that it is believed will prove of enormous value in developing the importance of New Orleans, already the greatest commercial city of the South. The work has taken many years, has required great engineering skill and foresight, and has cost over $20,000,000. New Orleans will now have one of the finest harbors in the country, and plans are already being perfected for additional piers and wharfs.

HOME ELECTRICAL PLANT

A resident of East Cleveland, Ohio, has solved the high cost of electric lighting by erecting a windmill on the roof of his home. The mill provides enough energy to furnish sufficient light for all lamps in the house. A special one-kilowatt generator is used, and the house bulbs of standard make consume 32 and 40 watts.

RADIO FOR THE DEAF

Harold Land of the California School for the Deaf in Berkeley, Cal., has fitted up this radio device whereby the deaf may hear by means of vibration. The special device consists of an extra loud amplifier, which is hooked in between the coils and earpieces, so that the vibrations against the ear drums may be made as strong as possible. Effectiveness of the device lies in the fact that the radio sends out more accentuated vibrations than the human voice.

Big Illinois "Gusher" : Preacher in Overalls

THE growing scarcity of oil and the steadily increasing demand for it makes any new discovery of the precious fluid important and interesting. A gusher that has just been struck in Clark County, Ill., the second one recently found in that locality, has started a rush of prospectors, and it is expected that scores of wells will be sunk in the present year. The first productive well has settled down to a regular output of about twenty barrels a day, but all indications are that the one pictured on these pages will exceed that record by many hundred per cent.

ODD PREACHING GARB

Devices for attracting working people to the church have been many and ingenious, though some have been of questionable value. Novelty at least characterizes the plan of the Rev. Hugh Orchard of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who noticed that attendance at the services was falling off and wondered why. He finally announced that he would preach in overalls and that worshippers should not hesitate to come in the same apparel if they chose. An immediate spurt in the attendance followed, many of the men and women wearing their ordinary working clothes and feeling no embarrassment because so many others were doing the same thing.

FATAL EXPLOSION

The explosion of the gas purifying plant of the Springfield (Mass.) Gas Light Company on Water and State Streets, on the western edge of the business district, brought death and havoc to the city. Four were killed, scores injured and hundreds endangered by the wrecking of buildings in the immediate vicinity and the crashing of glass over an area of several acres.

The property loss ran into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. The shock was felt twenty miles away.

For the most part the brunt of the blow fell on business buildings and business interests. But in one section of the riverfront district in which the explosion occurred, a residential district of tenements and flats, houses were made uninhabitable. Shattered windows and roofs and walls that collapsed with the concussion caused half a hundred families to vacate their homes and accept the hospitality of friends or welfare organizations. Over their abandoned household belongings members of the State constabulary and police kept guard, while four companies of National Guardsmen were held under arms in readiness for any emergency.

The injured were struck down over a wide area. In office buildings, City Hall, the Court House, banks and other places within a radius of two miles, persons were hurt—those near the scene by wreckage from the explosion proper and those further distant by crashing glass, fallen ceilings or dislodged objects. Several automobiles that were in the vicinity when the explosion came were under a bombardment that made the occupants unconscious and left the cars partly buried in wreckage.

FLYING FEET

In the Millrose A. C. games at Madison Square Garden on Jan. 31 the speedy Loren Murchison, former St. Louis "flash," spurted to a record in the 60-yard invitation sprint in which he was opposed by three of the best men at the distance in the country. He breasted the finish line winner in the phenomenal time of 6 1-5 seconds, shaving one-fifth of a second off the old record made first by Lon Meyers in 1882 and since equaled by a score of sprinters. Murchison got off like the lightning streak he is and flashed down the straightaway, crossing the finish line inches ahead of Bob McAllister, New York's "flying cop."

HAULING DOWN FLAG

AN important chapter of American history was closed when, on Jan. 24, the Stars and Stripes were hauled down from Ehrenbreitstein at Coblenz, Germany, and the American Army of Occupation started on its journey home. For more than four years the United States troops had been holding the Coblenz Bridgehead, while the French and British Armies of Occupation were quartered, respectively, at Mayence and Cologne. It is a matter of congratulation that during that period the discipline, moderation and good conduct of the troops have been up to the best traditions of the American Army. The rule of the American authorities has been firm and also just and considerate. There have been no disorders of any account, and the Americans leave the Rhine with the consciousness that they have done honor to their country.

The final ceremonies at Coblenz were simple but impressive. The troops stood at attention while the American flag was hauled down from over the fortress, where for four years, to be superceded by the French Tri-color, which was run up in its place. Commissioners were on the spot to express the best wishes of their country. General Allen, in command of the American forces, responded in appropriate terms. Vast throngs of people lined the streets through which the troops marched to the train station to see them off to Antwerp, Belgium.

LEAVING GERMANY

United States troops marched for the last time through the streets of Germany, which had been the headquarters of the American Army of Occupation since December, 1918, for withdrawal was issued by President Harding on Jan. 10, and the journey began on Jan. 24. The troops were entrained for Antwerp, Belgium, and sailed for this country (International.)

years, to be superseded by the tri-color, which a moment later

s were on the spot to express wishes of their country, and Allen, in command of the forces, responded in appropriate words. Vast throngs lined the streets through which the troops marched to the train that was to carry them to Antwerp, Belgium, where they were to embark on the transport St.

Mihiel for the United States. Everywhere were heard expressions of regret at the departure of the troops. Even for a mile or two from the town groups gathered along the railroad line cheering the soldiers on the trains. At Antwerp the Belgian authorities gave an official welcome to the American forces and the populace displayed heartfelt enthusiasm. The embarkation was made without incident, and the transport started on its journey home. Instead of coming directly to New York,

the troops were carried to Savannah, Ga., and at the time of writing were expected to reach there on Feb. 7. A royal greeting has been prepared for them by the people of the Southern city. Radiograms from the transport during the journey indicated that the St. Mihiel was meeting heavy weather, but that all on board were well and were desperately eager to catch sight once more of the homeland after four years of absence.

"Hitlerites" Demonstrate Against German Cabinet

ENORMOUS THRONGS IN BAVARIA PROTEST AGAINST POLICY OF GERMAN CABINET

Mass meeting of the followers of Adolf Hitler, the German Nationalist leader in Bavaria, held in Munich to demonstrate against the policies of the German Government on the Ruhr question, Sunday, Jan. 14. Many thousands are here seen cheering one of the orators. (International.)

THE difficulties of the present German Government in the matter of the Ruhr have been greatly increased by the recalcitrant attitude of Bavaria, which is at present the hotbed of monarchist and reactionary influences. The success of the Fascisti movement in Italy has given an additional impetus to the nationalistic program, as it is called, in Bavaria. It is estimated that there are already two hundred thousand German Fascisti in Munich and the territory immediately adjoining, and their tactics are steadily growing more bellicose. To the threats of the authorities they respond with counter-threats, and so powerful have they become that the responsible Minister of the Interior, Schweyer, has confessed his inability to stem the tide and has handed in his resignation.

The head of the movement is Adolf Hitler, and around him have clustered all the elements of discontent with the present régime. Hitler is a sign painter, with a gift for oratory which has made him the dominating figure in the movement. He has openly defied the Government to hinder his parades or suppress his speeches, and the authorities have been so impressed by the number and determination of his followers that they have hesitated to take up the gauntlet. Hitler seems to be plentifully supplied with funds, the source of which no man knows. Various explanations are offered of his mysterious wealth. By some he is said to be financed by the German industrialists. Others think that funds are being advanced by the Russian Soviet, not because they are specially in sympathy with his doctrines, but because they find their account in fishing in troubled waters and would welcome any upheaval in the hope that it would lead to a Communist triumph. By still others it is alleged that he is in the pay of the French, who are alleged thus to be furthering the dismemberment of Germany.

Both extremes of political opinion are hoping to derive some benefit from the Hitlerite movement. The Communists, who are strong in that section of the country, are hoping that the Fascisti element may proceed to such excesses as to provoke a revulsion of popular feeling in favor of themselves. The monarchist and reactionaries on the other hand are eager to welcome any movement that threatens to overturn the existing régime, which they

TAXES PAID IN KIND

Since money has practically lost its value in Russia the Soviet Government is experimenting in collecting taxes from the peasants in the form of products of the soil. A tax train is here shown at Khokand, to which grain and other foodstuffs are being brought as tax payments.

accuse of being pitifully weak and vacillating. What the Fascisti movement will really accomplish is conjectural, but there is no doubt that it has captured the imagination of a large section of the people of Bavaria, from which it is rapidly spreading into other parts of Germany.

TAXES IN KIND

Reminiscent of the old days of barter is the picture of Russian peasants paying taxes in grain and other cereals, because the Russian ruble is so worthless that it takes a million of them to pay for a ride in a trolley car. It is a striking illustration of the practical results of the Soviet régime that has turned back the clock of progress and sent the economic life of unhappy Russia down to the rude, clumsy and uncouth level of thousands of years ago.

Scenes in Current Plays: "Listening In" : "Will Shakespeare" "Mary the 3rd"

SCENE in the mystery play "Listening In," at the Bijou Theatre, New York, when the Assistant District Attorney, who had just been shot and was supposed to be dead, creates a sensation by his sudden entrance into the room of the house where most of the characters of the play are assembled. The story revolves about the young heir, John Coomber (Ernest Glendening), to a house that was reputed to be haunted. Ghostly figures and spirit messages come to him and reveal events that are about to happen. One such event was an approaching train wreck. Coomber treated the message as reliable and was really instrumental in preventing the disaster. The fact that he knew of the event, however, was regarded as suspicious, and the Assistant District Attorney came to question him. At the time of his coming Coomber had received a message that death lurked about the house, and that anybody who entered should not be permitted to leave before sunset. The Assistant District Attorney scoffed at the warning, left the house and was really shot in a scuffle that ensued in the room. A bewildering series of events leads to the unfolding of the mystery.

MOMENT in Clemence Dane's play "Will Shakespeare," at the National Theatre, when Queen Elizabeth (Haidee Wright) is telling Shakespeare (Otto Kruger) that he must write for England the great plays which his country expects of him; that he must work until the final sleep of death. The playwright obeys the royal mandate, although during the time he is evolving his immortal works he is haunted by the picture of Mary Fitton, the maid of honor, who had broken his heart and caused him to kill his closest friend, "Kit Marlowe." Her face is always staring at him from the pages he is writing, and his heart is wrung with anguish as he labors at his task. The story is poignant and full of the flavor of the Elizabethan age and the drama of the time.

IN the comedy "Mary the 3rd," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, Louise Huff enacts the Marys of the three periods into which the play is divided. The playwright holds up the mirror to marriage, and the reflection is a satire in which is mingled more of romance, more of femininity, more of conflicting forces than is usually found in satirical plays. The influence of mid-Victorian precepts led the Mary of 1870 to fall back on all the resources of her sex to ensnare a mate. The Mary of 1897, the mother of the present Mary, preferred to be taken. Neither marriage is successful. The Mary of 1923, pondering over the problem, determines to try an experimental marriage, and, accompanied by four other moderns, she goes on a proposed camping expedition, as here pictured, without a chaperon. Then come tears on the part of the mother, fumings from her father, which causes Mary to return in the midst of a raging quarrel between the two. This scene reveals to Mary the real existence under the veneer of domestic tranquillity, and out of the wreck comes Mary's hopeful solution.

France Tightening Grip on Rich Ruhr District

GERMAN CROWDS HOOT THE FRENCH

One of the near riots in front of the Kaiserhof Hotel, Essen, the headquarters of the French military authorities, shortly after the troops occupied the city. The German mounted policemen are shown dispersing the crowd. Nothing serious resulted and the incident passed without any casualties. Similar demonstrations have occurred in other cities.

GERMAN COAL MAGNATES UNDER ARREST

Directors Olfe and Spindler, captains of industry in the Ruhr district, leaving French headquarters under guard of French soldiers. The men were arrested for refusing to co-operate with the French in the production of coal from the Ruhr mines. The trial resulted in moderate fines being levied upon the defendants. The lightness of the penalty was due to the fact that it was admitted the Germans acted from patriotic motives. (P. & A. Photos.)

THE French have pursued the occupation of the Ruhr district with method and tenacity. There has been no indication of any lessening of the pressure that the movement was designed to exert upon the German authorities. To every additional defiance from Berlin the French have answered by an extension of their lines until they now hold the district encircled in an iron grip. There has as yet been no sign of weakening on the part of the German Government, which has steadily financed the workers of the Ruhr district in order to keep them from digging coal. One of the latest developments in the situation has been the incursion by French forces into Baden from over the Kehl Bridge at Strassburg. This was alleged to be a counter movement to the action of the German Government in holding up through express trains that have been running between Prague and Paris. In the meantime the greater part of the miners have returned to work and coal is being produced to an extent estimated at about 40 per cent. of the normal. The shortage of the coal cars, however, has made this to some extent a source of embarrassment, for the coal is piling up at such a rate about the pitheads that there will soon be no room for more, and the miners will be forced in that event to suspend work.

FRENCH TANKS PASSING THROUGH GLADBECK

Grim tanks of the French Army of Occupation passing through one of the industrial towns of the Ruhr district. There have thus far been no disorders of any account, but the policy adopted has been one of passive resistance. (© Underwood & Underwood.)

Vessel Held in Grip of Ice Floes on Lake Michigan

ARCTIC CONDITIONS ON LAKE MICHIGAN

Vessel plying as a ferry between Mackinaw City and St. Ignace caught by great ice floes and held until dynamite cleared a passage for the ship across the lake. The ship's passengers were able to walk across the ice to their destination. (International.)

WHILE the Winter has been comparatively mild in the vicinity of New York City, it has been exceptionally severe in other sections of the country. In upper New York State there were snow-falls on seventeen consecutive days, a record that has not been equaled since 1874. On certain parts of Lake Michigan there has been a frozen surface reaching from shore to shore, as on the occasion illustrated in the picture here shown of a ferryboat held fast in the ice. Passengers, frustrated in their design of crossing the lake in the boat, made the best of it and walked on the ice to their destination.

"SHOOTING" FLAMES

A London device for extinguishing flames, invented jointly by Major Bentley and Arthur Weis, has unusual merits of portability and precision. It consists of a small apparatus that can be readily carried in one hand and which operates very much like a revolver. The chemicals which it contains can be liberated by the pressure of a "trigger" and aimed directly at the flames, thus getting instantly at the heart of the trouble.

WASHINGTON FLURRY

A sensation has been caused in Washington official society by letters written by Mrs. Miles Poindexter to a Western newspaper, in which caustic references are made to Cabinet members and others high in public life. Senator Poindexter was recently defeated for re-election, and some of the people referred to in the letters are men who, it is claimed, promised to aid him in his campaign but failed to do so.

MAYOR AND MRS. HYLAN ENJOYING OCEAN BREEZES

Mayor John F. Hylan of New York City and Mrs. Hylan are here shown preparing to take a dip in the waves at Palm Beach, Fla., where the Chief Executive of the city is taking his annual vacation. The departure of the Mayor from the city had as its prelude a lively controversy stirred up by Controller Craig, who pointed out that the Mayor had absented himself from his official post for more than seventy days in the course of the last few months. It was stated by the Mayor's adherents that his health had not been good recently and that a part at least of his vacation had been taken under the orders of his physician.

Trunks and hatboxes. Then the handbags.

Half a hundred things, it seemed, must be crowded in for that trip from London to New York.

Ten minutes left to catch the boat train. Zip! In went the cherry-red tube of Colgate's. Right on top, where she could get it quickly. Last in, first out. That's how this dainty movie star from overseas feels about Colgate's.

Already Miss Mackaill has won her place in the hearts of American picture lovers in "The Streets of New York", a current Arrow release.

A motion picture star must run no risks with the beauty of her smile. That's why Miss Mackaill is glad that she has used Colgate's all her life. It has kept her teeth white and shining by gently "washing" them—without the slightest injury to the precious enamel.

Does your work exhaust and fret you or leave you fresh and ready for fun?

CAN any woman be a good pal if evening finds her languid—uninterested, and uninteresting?

Some women seem to be invigorated by the very tasks that are irksome to others. They can iron, cook, sew, stand behind a counter or work all day in an office without drudging, because their vitality is not continually sapped by fatigue. Their work leaves them unfagged and vivacious.

Nagging Feet Tire You

Most women are on their feet a great deal of the time. Many of these women have learned that unnatural shoes—shoes with high heels, pointed toes, stiff arches—are one of the most common causes of fatigue. In such shoes your feet nag at your nervous system and gradually break it down. They make the feet hurt. And feet that hurt tire you. More than that, high heels tilt the body out of balance and cause backache and organic troubles.

Unnatural shoes weaken the foot muscles through disuse. Feet that have lost their muscular strength can no longer be young and springy.

Human Ingenuity Cannot Improve Upon the Foot

For this reason Cantilever Shoes are made to conform to the foot in every possible way. They have flexible arches instead of the usual stiff shanks found in ordinary shoes. The flexible arch gives just the right support and insures the foot sufficient exercise to strengthen the muscles that hold the bones of the arch in place. Guard against weakened foot muscles that cause the arch of the foot to flatten down. Many a woman suffers from "weak foot" who could have avoided it.

Cantilever Shoes Are Light- Weight and Restful

Cantilevers are made of fine, light-weight materials that are lasted to hold their shape. Natural lines have been cleverly built into them without spoiling their trimness. The neatly rounded toe is good looking. The low, medium or Cuban heel keeps the body correctly poised for health and comfort.

Look for the trademark when buying. It is your guarantee of the genuine Cantilever Shoe. If you do not find a dealer who is near you listed in the column at the left, write the manufacturers, Morse & Burt Co., 11 Carlton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., for the address of a nearby dealer and for an informative and interesting book on foot comfort.
